THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1889.

The Providence Journal, the apostate, seems to think that Mr. Wanamaker has no qualifications for the Post Office Department. Like all others, it thinks a long and valuable business experience counts for nothing. Crossly it will enlighten the public as to the qualifications of Vilas or Dickenson, for this responsible position which both have used to demonstrate the service.

The Democratic organization is not penetrated with the lofty spirit of the Administration which has just expired, they can never regain the confidence of the country.—Philadelphia Record.

This is an unique theory. At the Adminstration "expired" because the people had no confidence in its alleged "lofty spirit" how is the party to regain confidence by adopting what has already been rejected?

"Free raw materials as the principal objective point for future effort," is the declaration in the address of the Massachusetts Tax-Roll Reform League. Upon the success of that purpose depends the future of England. The world over every year will make it more plain.

Note what are raw materials. The free traders are loud in this demand for raw materials but the term is very ambiguous one. What is raw material in one case is no industry of itself in another.

One of the charges of disaffected Democrats against Mr. Cleveland is that he made no terrible exposures of Rutherford's scandals, though he had four years to do it. The explanation is simple, says the New York Tribune. Mr. Cleveland was "willful," but the racailles weren't there. Four years of Democratic rule gave him enough to make it clear that for twenty-four years the country had been governed blinded and economically. That is one reason why the Republican party came back and why it will stay.

Senator Heath, in exposing the corruption of the voters by the Republicans and their supporters of the Tax-Roll and other tax-payer's pitcher pretended during his far-fetched defense for a far-fetched and shadowed count, "has brought upon himself the curse of the Tammany machine.—Democrats.

We congratulate the Kennebec Senator upon the triumphs his speech has developed. When he took the door off, he could have been foretold from what source his indorsement would come. Heath and Barker should travel as the great auditing combination.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press writes: As to the talk of an extra session, there is no prospect of one being held at this time. Mr. Allard said to-day that he did not expect an extra session before fall, and he thought one probable in October. There is no urgent need of one at this time. Mr. Fiske said he did not think there would be an extra session and Mr. Aldrich expressed a similar opinion. The public statement that Mr. Blaine had said there ought to be an extra session was once incorrect. Mr. Blaine has said nothing of the kind.

The Boston Herald cannot quite go the methods of the Indiana Democrats. It says: "The Democrats of Indiana are among the most objectionable politicians that the country furnishes. We believe this to have been true through several generations, and they do not improve a particle in our day. The Republicans carried the last election there by a popular vote and elected their Governor. With that the right to appointments to office, and in exercising it, he carries out the will of the people. The Democrats, however, by gerrymandering the State, have managed to thwart the will of the people, as far as the Legislature is concerned, by giving themselves a majority in that body. He is inciting them to have been unscrupulous enough to take away the power of appointment to offices that is vested in the Governor in nearly all cases, and to appropriate it to themselves."

The Corcoran's investigation of the railroad accident at Boyd's Siding was concluded in this city, Wednesday. After hearing all the evidence that had a bearing upon the case the jury found that the accident, resulting in the death of Mr. Mudgett, Mr. Campbell and Mr. Goodnow, was caused by the negligence of William H. Bither, an employee of the road, who failed to place the switch on the main line after it had been thrown on to the siding. This verdict appears to be entirely warranted by the evidence. The testimony of Kingman conclusively pointed to Bither as the man responsible for the possible accident, but in a matter of such grave importance we refrained from any particular expression of opinion while the jury had the case under consideration. It appears that the conductor of the freight train delayed the duty of placing the switch right for the main line to Bither and that he forgot to attend to it. In view of the well known consequences of this transfer of duty it would seem that hereafter, if such is not already the fact, rigid instructions should be given to all employees of the road to attend personally to all duties which pertain to their position. The degree of Bither's neglect will have to be determined by the Courts.

The Boston Standard, in criticism of the Commercial's comments on the result of the city election, invites attention again to the fact that the management of that paper was opposed to the nomination of Mayor Briggs and sympathized openly as it did with a candidate which represented interests opposite to those of the city.—Commercial.

The above is all and would be entitled to no consideration whatever were it not for the fact that we are tired and sick of hearing Mr. J. P. Bass attack a better citizen than himself. Ever since Alderman Real wrangled Ward Two from the Democratic party a year ago he has been the target for the arrows of the Commercial. It cannot be said to defend of course that it was merely opposing Mr. Real's position on the railroad question; because it attacks have been of the most indiscriminate character, often times of a contemptible personal nature, as for instance its references to his hotel business. However much the citizens of Bangor may disagree with Mr. Real regarding the city's railroad, it is certainly his complaint for Mr. J. P. Bass to accuse anyone of being associated with speculator purposes, or a desire to further private ends. When, as is the case with Mr. Bass, it is a matter of current comment in the paper that he has an eye single to the enhancement in the value of certain property, for his personal benefit, it would at least be in better taste for his paper to have less to say about the alleged so-called motives of other people. Those people who live in a given house should not throw stones unless they were a good.

The Boston Post, after excusing and excusing Mr. Cleveland's violation of the civil service law for four years, now has the courage to remark that the opening act of the new administration are acts of a sort to relieve the anxiety of the friends of reform. Surely the record, the Post has made in this time hardly entitles it to pose as the mouth-piece of reform.

The Legislature brought its session to a close Wednesday and a final adjournment was had and these scenes of fun and frolic that usually mark the last hours of many weeks of hard work! The here-to-forgotten soldiers renewed their youth as it were and celebrated their release from legislative care much as they formerly welcomed the close of a long term in school. Every one was happy and went in for a good time. The session has been an industrious one and much business has been transacted. Considerable time has been occupied with private legislation and the members demand a reform in the respect, but as a rule legislation has been pushed as expeditiously as was consistent with a due regard for practical results. The appropriations have been quite large, but as a member stated it, the money has been well spent in the best interests of the State. A good deal of the credit for the promptness with which the business of the Legislature has been conducted is due to the presiding officers. President Lord is the Senate and Speaker Dowling the House have shown great tact in the administration of their arduous duties and their rulings have been prompt and impartial. The members of both branches give cordial heed to the efficiency of the presiding officers.

Plain Talk to Arkansas Democrats.

The church of Judge George S. Cunningham to the Conway County Grand Jury, now sitting at Mountain, Arkansas, is exciting much comment. He said, in the course of his remarks:

"The recent assassination of this country was instigated by others who ought to be hanged with the assassin. The guilty persons are still at large. These persons did not intend to be exposed from punishment because of any position or influence they might have in the community; I do not know who they are. I wish I did. I would sell you. But mind you, political assassination does not mean that the assassin is a bad man. He is not. He is a good man. He is a good man of life, but from some half-baked gentleman who pretend to be respectable, and they ought to be hung. They tell you, 'I am a good Democrat.' I have a son, I have a daughter. I have a wife. I have a home. I have a family. I am a Democrat, but I must have been instigated. I would, just as I let publish Democratic murderer as any other. I want to appeal to you as Democrats to put your heads together, the criminal and the assassin, and see if you can't get them hung."

There is no man who does not know that murder and assassination had the results and will continue to be the result of the methods that have been employed in Congress. You must have a good man to be a good man. You must have a good man to be a good man. You must have a good man to be a good man. The law guarantees every American protection. The question is not is he a Democrat or Republican, a black man or a white man, but is he an American citizen? and his rights must be protected on election day or on every other day.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press writes: As to the talk of an extra session, there is no prospect of one being held at this time. Mr. Allard said to-day that he did not expect an extra session before fall, and he thought one probable in October. There is no urgent need of one at this time. The White's Special Correspondent Tells the Pleasant Story.

A local W. G. Courier article March 13. "I feel like one of trends done so as banquet hall doors close. Lights are dead, who are led in all but we departed over the words that came in a low tone of Clerk Fessenden as he uttered during the noon recess for one or two visitors and a messenger. We were told it was soon most apt to stir up a general undercurrent of feeling it perplexed the minds of all who were engaged in the work and pleased a great deal of us."

It is now in its first eleven when the has well roughed its routine work and a series of cross gossips was dry for all remarks and other matters made this form the close of the month. Mr. Dickey of Portland, Mr. C. H. Parker of Portland, Mr. J. T. Powers, Mr. G. L. D. and Mr. J. C. Purdy, Portland, Mr. W. A. Durbin of Sprague, Goodell, etc.

Mr. Dickey was one direct, and his word he spoke clearly from a sincere and deep faith that he had fully the value of his form during this Legislature. I am not sure that spoke evinced a strong bias in their words could be said in the eyes of Mr. Dickey as I took his seat after his death.

I had a ride took a ride in my carriage, an exchange of photographs with other friendly officers of like character, names in autograph album performed by many of the barbers. The words on every lip is the slogan about the halls and corridors, "Home. When do you leave?" the ultimate query. In the lobby of the hotel, for hotel, was presented the license to the business, in itself a thrill in the rounds during the night. The portrait was purchased by colleagues and friends of the venerable man from whom took at the afternoon speaker Dow was presented with a speech which he has used during the day.

Senate today the bill to prohibit gambling and trust companies from holding stock in administrators and executors of estates was unanimously striking out word "executors and trustee". No amendment was reached on the law that will give the House refusing to accept committee of conference.

In the report of the Judiciary Committee on bills to roll over to the Senate, the school was ready by all. Lord Mr. Libby, of Cumberland, said to that portion of the report which stated that the matter had been satisfactorily adjusted. As a member of the committee he declared that the matter had been satisfactorily adjusted and added that the words satisfactorily had been struck out.

Says Fleath that the Performer's bill had been left by the Legislature in view of a lack of time to settle the various matter and in hopes that the question could be settled by the end of the session.

The House resolved commendatory of the bill, and other bills and other bills of the department were passed.

Mr. Walker of Knox offered a resolve that the President's gavel which had been yielded so faithfully by him be presented to him.

Mr. Libby of Cumberland, in an eloquent speech, presented the resolve for the faithful services of President.

Mr. Linnes seconded that resolve in a few words.

He was followed by Senator Walton, whose remarks were not only earnest, but eloquent.

Mr. Heath presented to the President, behalf of the Senate, a life size crayon portrait. Mr. Heath spoke of the honor in which the President had doted himself during the canvass for the position and the fairness of his trial.

President Ladd's response referred to the presentation of the elegant portrait and gave President Ladd said Mr. Secretary and Senators. For the time which you have just adopted, and for your generous expressions of good will and approval which you have been so kind to extend and for the gifts which you have presented me, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. The power we have given you to express my feelings that need of you are endowed with. I can only say that I sincerely thank you, and for the resolution and those words of friendship, but for you.

I am truly grateful and I thank you.

hang it on the walls in my home where it shall be daily seen by myself, all my children and friends. It will be looked upon with feelings of pleasure and pride because it is your gift because it is a token of the friendship of the Senate of Maine. This closing day of the session will always be remembered as one of the brightest spots in my life, for you have not only expressed your approval of my conduct, but in the strongest possible language indicated your friendship for me. Senators, in a few short minutes our duties as legislators will be over and we shall return to the people to speak their verdict upon the value and importance of our work. I believe that this can be truthfully said.

That we have deserved more earnestly to enact wise, impartial and wholesome laws than has the Senate of 1889. No committees have labored more faithfully or industriously than the committees of this Legislature. And now, Senators, while I feel almost unable to express my thankfulness as I would like, or to express to you how earnestly I hope that to you all in the future there shall come in a large degree prosperity, health and happiness to wish to say that I shall hope to see all it in the halls of this Capitol, at my home or elsewhere, and if perchance we should never again, may we all meet in the great hereafter. Once more I thank you for your kindness and good will. (Applause.)

Home.

An attempt to get the Temperance bill before the House again failed 45 to 40.

The Lewiston hospital bill came up again a Committee of Conference being proposed by the Senate and the matter was tabled.

The executive thanks were extended to subordinate officers of this branch.

A 3:35 p.m. both branches finally adjourned, having been in session 71 days.

FROM CAMPBELL.

The Town & Financial Condition and Prospects.

CAMPBELL, March 13.—The auditor's report of the town of Campbell is published to-day. The amount expended on roads including four new streets last year, was $3,763.82. The assessed valuation is $1,704,000. The total valuation is doubtless about $10,000 a thousand. It does not show less than one and a half per cent on the actual valuation. In the warrant for the John meeting next Monday several articles for building new streets also to aid the building of the railroad from Rockland to Campobell which looks favorable. May favor building a railroad from the center of the State, connecting Augusta or Waterville with Canada.

FROM BIDDEFORD.

Re-cut of the sea river.

BIDDEFORD, March 13.—The sea river opened to navigation this morning a month earlier than last year.
